

Make a splash at Faulconer Gallery

Young artists are invited to come and make “splashy” art with Tilly Woodward, Grinnell College’s curator of academic and community outreach, this Saturday in the north patio of the Bucksbaum Center for the Arts.

Participants will print, paint, draw and saw, and all art created by the children will be donated to the Oct. 10 Splash Art Auction at the Grinnell Country Club. There they will be sold to the highest bidder to help raise funds for the community’s new aquatic center. There will be a silent auction, hors d’oeuvres, entertainment from 6 to 7 p.m., and the live auction begins at 7 p.m. “Parents, you’ll want to be there!” organizers say of the auction, so mark your calendar now.

This Saturday, Sept. 13, from 10:30 a.m. to noon kids of all ages are welcome to join Woodward and make a splash with their artistic talent.

“It should be a fun morning for kids to make art, get involved in civic engagement, eat cookies and drink lemonade and see the Faulconer Gallery’s terrific exhibit, ‘Return of the Yellow Peril: A Survey of the Works of Roger Shimomura.’ Parents and volunteers are welcome!” she says.

All materials and refreshments will be provided by the Faulconer Gallery which is located in the Bucksbaum Center for the Arts, 1108 Park Street (northeast corner of Sixth and Park) on the Grinnell College campus. Questions? Contact Tilly Woodward @ 269-4663 or woodward@grinnell.edu

For more information about the auction – which will feature a variety of items created by area artists, craftsmen and craftswomen – contact the Splash campaign’s art auction committee members Gloria Bachmann, Sue Ramsey and Cynthia Sherman.